

JOB OFFER

The European Newspaper Publishers' Association (ENPA) has an immediate vacancy based in Brussels for an exceptional and motivated individual on a permanent basis with the title:

EU Policy Advisor

This challenging position involves:

- Monitoring and analysing the developments of European public policies (primary focus EU and Council of Europe) relevant to the publishing sector.
- Developing and maintaining contacts within European Institutions, Council of Europe and with other key policy stakeholders.
- Drafting of position papers, reports and external publications.
- Liaising with member organisations.
- Management of working groups on current ENPA policy priorities.
- Representing ENPA members at meetings with policy-makers and organizing ENPA delegation visits to policy-makers at the highest-level.

Requirements for this post:

- Completed university degree, preferably in European Law. Specific experience of intellectual property issues is a distinct advantage.
- Self-starter with the ability to quickly build network of contacts.
- Good knowledge of the functioning and operations of the EU institutions.
- Professional experience in the EU sector, ideally in a European association.
- Awareness of and interest in recent market developments across the newspaper and related media industries.
- Excellent command equivalent to mother-tongue level of both written and spoken English; good knowledge of French and/or another EU language.
- Willingness to travel in Europe.
- Excellent team player. Ability to work in a multicultural environment.

Interviews will be held in early September. Only the short-listed candidates will be contacted. The applications will not be returned.
